Financing a Home for India Home

India Home began in 2008 when co-founder Dr. Vasundhara Kalasapudi sought to create elder care services for the South Asian and Indo-Caribbean immigrant community that were culturally competent and community oriented. Despite receiving a substantial government grant from New York City, India Home still did not have the means to purchase property for use as an office or program space. "With FJC's loan, for the first time India Home has a home, a central place to coordinate with all of our centers," says Dr. Kalasapudi.

Customizing Your Giving: Getting Creative with What You Give

In the second installment of our new blog series "The Power of the Personal Series: Ideas and Inspiration from a Boutique DAF Sponsor," our CEO Sam Marks FJC highlights a number of donors that transformed their non-cash assets into a philanthropic resource for good in the world. Neal Myerberg, a philanthropic advisor and longtime Board Member of FJC, says, "These are some of the more challenging and inspiring transactions we handle on behalf of our donors."

A Modest Grant Amplifies a Life's Work in Peacebuilding

FJC donor David Phillips writes an inaugural post in FJC's new blog series, "Why I Give... And How." As the Director of Columbia University's Program on Peacebuilding and Human Rights, Mr. Phillips focuses both his work and philanthropy to build peace in Northern Syria. "Strategic philanthropy, even modest amounts, can help meet the basic needs of students...It won't stop the war, but it can restore hope and rebuild academic institutions."
